TRAVELLERS' AID WORK

The work of this department has been brought to your notice in a casual way for a number of years, and its importance realized to the extent that it was needful in large centres of population and was a worthy object of support. But for fear that some have not grasped how far-reaching it may become, and the means of protection it provides for the unwary, we present these facts for your consideration.

Have you ever given it a thought that those who most need this protection are the girls from your own and other similar communities.

To many the work has been too long a means of helpfulness to need any introduction to its friends and to the travelling public as well.

The first efforts in this work on record were in 1866 when the Boston Y.W.C.A. tried to assist young women travelling alone, by means of correspondence and widely distributed warnings.

The first Canadian T. A. worker in Canada was employed by the Y.W.C.A., of Quebec.

Travellers' Aid work must neccessarily deal with reasons why a person leaves home, the false letters, advertisements, offered positions, dangerous addresses, etc., and protect them in all the complications of travel, and on until they arrive at their destination, or assisted to their own home, a respectable boarding house, and finally place their name with some respectable organization making the person a vital part of the community, working throughout without regard to age, race, color, or class. A child was brought to Toronto from a country place in Dakota for a visit. It became imperative that the child should go home. No one could go with her, but through the agency of the T. A. she had a safe and happy journey.

It links the rural districts to the cities so that any woman or child leaving one of these communities can be put in touch with the T. A. in any of the cities she may intend to visit. It provides an avenue through which reliable information may be obtained re the good faith of would-be employers at distant points.

A young girl was seen one night by a T. A. in Toronto to leave a train. She said she had answered an advertisement, and that her employer was to be there to meet her. When the T. A. saw the name and address she remembered having seen the human vulture at an earlier train, and that she had taken herself off at the approach of the T. A. The girl, a mere child, was cared for and sent home the next day.

What will you give in exchange for a soul rescued thus from sin and misery.

BURNED TO DEATH NEAR ROBLIN

Friday morning last a most distressing accident occurred resulting in the death of Master Archie Connell. How the accident came to happen will probably never be known. Thursday the young lad had been employed by Mr. Sidney Asselstine, a farmer residing about two miles west of the village of Roblin, to drive cattle, and stayed over night at the home of his employer. About two o'clock in the morning a daughter of Mr. Asselstine was awakened by a noise down stairs and upon investigation found the room occupied by the young lad to be on fire, and the boy lying on the floor close to the door. He was quickly removed and the fire extinguished. It was found the little fellow had been seriously burned, and he died a few hours later, evidently having inhaled considerable fire and smoke. An investigation of the room led to the belief that the lamp had exploded and in trying to put out the fire the boy's clothing had become ignited resulting in the serious burns which caused his death. Deceased was an exceedingly bright little lad of about fourteen years of age, and was the only son of Mr. Thos. Connell, of Roblin. Some months ago he was converted to God during the revival meetings in the Standard Church, and was true to the professions of his faith up to the time of his death. The funeral service was held in the Standard Church at Roblin Saturday afternoon, Rev. Seale having charge of the service, assisted by Revs. Campbell and Wilson. Rev. Seale took for his text a portion of the 24th chapter of Matthew, the 44th verse, "Therefore be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh." The church was far too small to accommodate the large crowd of friends and sympathizers who came to pay their last respects to the young lad who had met such a tragic death, and to sympathize with the sorrowing father and family. The remains were laid to rest in the Roblin cemetery just south of the village. Besides his father he leaves two sisters, Misses Ethel and Pearl, to mourn. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the father and family in this their hour of sad bereavement.

HANGMEN WANT MORE PAY.

History of This Sinister Calling In England.

An unusually weird topic came up for debate the other day in the British House of Commons, when the fees of hangmen were discussed by the honorable members. This occasion inspired a correspondent of the Manchester Guardian to send in the following contribution touching upon the history of that sinister trade:

"Hangmen have always been regarded as dreadful persons in England, though not without a certain gruesome attraction, especially to curious people of more or less diseased imaginations. But they have requited this interest in different ways. Marwood, for instance, was a great frequenter of the Green Dragon in Fleet Street after carrying out his duties at Newgate in the morning, and 'the retiring little man, dressed in the most funereal of clothes, clutching a pint pot with his long and nervous fingers, could sometimes be drawn out for a consideration by the young bloods who knew his favorite haunt and resorted thither.' Very different was the fate of those who tried to "draw" Calcraft when in retirement he visited the Peacock at Islington. It was his rule that no reference to the subject of his profession must be made in his hearing. He looked like 'an old alderman,' and his real identity was supposed to be a great secret; he even changed his name to Smithson, and delighted to discourse of the old coaching days and to recall the time when he himself was a mail guard.

"James Berry, like his successor in the post of hangmen, thought himself inadequately paid. In his autobiography Berry suggests that the Home Office should pay the hangman a fixed salary of £350 a year. He would have much preferred this to the fee of £10 for an execution. It would bring him a larger income, for he reckoned on an average of only twenty executions in a year, and, moreover, the hangman would be spared the distasteful task of perusing newspaper reports in the hope that a fellow creature may be condemned to death.' Berry points regretfully to the remuneration of his French confrere, M. Antoine Deibler—£560 a year, with a similar amount to divide among his four assistants. Sanson, the first executioner to manage a guillotine, was originally paid £1,520 a year, but when executioners were appointed in each department this was reduced to £800. Before the Revolution the legal tariff in France was 25s. for a beheading, 16s. 8d. for a burning at the stake, and the same amount for a hanging, with allowances for the erection of a scaffold or the provision of fuel.'

MURDERED BY BANDITS

Two Policemen Shot by Desperate Men.

Alberta Town Was Scene of Dramatic Fight When Train Robbers Fought With Officers Who Tried to Arrest Them—Leader of the Gang Made Good His Escape.

BELLEVUE, Alta., Aug. 10.—In a bitter fight with revolvers in a cafe here and on the streets Saturday afternoon one bandit and two policemen were killed. Another bandit got away, and, with a third, is in hiding in the piled-up mass of rocks known as the Frank Slide at the east entrance of Crow's Nest Pass.

The dead bandit is George Akroff. The dead policemen are Corpl. E. Usher of the Mounted Police, and Frederick Bailey of the Alberta Provincial Police. The other bandit in the fight, Tom Bassoff, believed to be the leader of the gang, was wounded before he got away. The bandits are known to be the men who held up the C.P.R. train at Sentinel last Monday.

More police are being rushed to the scene in an effort to make a clean-up of the gang.

The bandits left one of their number behind, George Akroff, killed by a bullet from a gun in the hands of Constable Frewin of the Alberta Provincial Police, who fought from the cover of the police barracks on the edge of the mining camp, as the bandits were making their escape. Bassoff was badly wounded in the arm at the same time.

A posse of police and citizens which set out to train him toward the slide was able to follow his trail of blood for half a mile before losing it in the woods at the edge of the slide.

With the wounded man, Tom Bassoff, who is the leader of the gang, and the real gunman of the party, is Alex. Areloff, the third bandit, who was not present at the battle in Bellevue, but who later joined his leader, and is now with him on the slide.

Bassoff and Akroff came out of the hills about noon on Saturday, going into Bellevue, where they have friends. They lounged around for a time, and then went into the Bellevue Cafe for a meal. Areloff was not with them, but is thought to have been left somewhere near the outskirts of the town on guard.

Several of the residents of Bellevue became suspicious of the two men, and informed Corpl. Usher and Constable Bailey, who were at police headquarters with Constable Frewin. They proceeded to the cafe, and in one of the booths they came across the bandits.

The bandits were ordered to hold up their hands.

"What for?" asked Bassoff.

"Hold them up," commanded Usher, who was in the lead.

Then the bandits pulled. Bassoff opened up with his revolver, a heavy German officer type which he had used to cow passengers on the trains five days before. The policemen backed up, both shooting. Seven shots were fired by them into the booth, but the bandits evidently ducked under the table and escaped.

Then the desperadoes issued from the booth, Bassoff leading in the gun play. Corpl. Usher fell just a few feet inside the cafe door. Bailey fell just outside. Bassoff grabbed Usher's smoking gun, and as they passed the unconscious body lying prostrate on the floor they put eight more shots into his body.

The men turned west along the main street of the town leading out of the village. They passed the police headquarters. Constable Frewin opened fire through a window. Akroff went down, and Bassoff was hit through the arm, but continued on his way, headed for the slide.

The police and the citizens followed Bassoff until they lost his trail in some woods on the edge of the slide, then they scattered to surround the place until more police could arrive.

A call was sent to Lethbridge and Macleod, and at five o'clock a special train was sent west with all available men. Supt. Pennefather of "K" Division, and Inspector Risk of "D" Division, Alberta Provincial Police, followed by motor to take charge of the man-hunt. On Saturday night 300 men surrounded the slide.

If the bandits have a mind to remain in hiding on the slide, which is nearly two miles square across the valley at the eastern entrance to the Crow's Nest Pass and covered with rocks, many of them as large as a two-story residence, they may hold off the police for several days. They have water, but it is believed they have little or no provisions.

An inquest was held at Bellevue Saturday night. The remains of the bandit who was killed were identified as those of George Akroff by members of the C.P.R. train crew which was held up. The jury found that Corpl. Usher and Constable Bailey had come to their death while in the discharge of their duty as a result of revolver shots at the hands of unidentified bandits who had escaped.

Constable Frewin was exonerated of all blame in shooting Akroff, and was highly commended for his action. Constable Bailey was a member of a well-known Macleod, Alberta, family, and his remains have been forwarded there for interment.

Corpl. Usher had been a member of the Mounted Police for five years.

It is possible that the squadron of 150 Mounted Police in summer training at Banff may be sent to the scene, as the police are determined the desperadoes must not be allowed to escape following the killing of two members of the force.

ALLIES FACE A CRISIS

Situation Has Grown More Serious Again

Bolsheviki Have Grown Defiant—Russians Plan to Occupy Warsaw and Set Up Soviet Government—Great Britain and France Will Help Polish Resistance.

HYTHE, Eng., Aug. 10.—Great Britain and France are convinced that the Bolsheviki intend to capture Warsaw and set up a Soviet Government in Poland.

This was learned from an official source following an announcement at the conference between Premier Lloyd George of Great Britain and Premier Millerand of France, held Sunday to discuss the Polish situation, that the conference would continue during the week when the Premiers will pass upon naval, military and economic plans for saving Poland. These plans are being drawn up by Marshal Foch and Field Marshal Sir Henry Wilson, Chief of the British Imperial Staff.

These were the outstanding developments, following an official announcement that the Soviet Government had definitely refused a ten-days' truce, requested by Mr. Lloyd George as a result of Friday's meeting with the Russian mission headed by M. Kameneff and M. Krassin.

While there has been no talk of officially declaring war on Russia, the Allies have decided to give Poland all possible military, naval and economic assistance without delay.

The Premiers received two notes from Moscow Sunday in answer to Mr. Lloyd George's request for a truce. They sent another note to the Soviet, and also advised Poland to seek a truce direct from the Bolsheviki, who indicated in their refusal of the truce that if the request came direct from the Poles it might have a better chance of being granted. One of the notes received from the Bolsheviki said a meeting of the Poles and Russians had been called for Minsk next Wednesday, and that the Bolsheviki preferred to make their own arrangements with the Poles.

It was reliably reported that the blockade on Russia would be reimposed immediately.

Mr. Lloyd George has deferred his promised statement in the House of Commons until Tuesday.

The French are urging the establishment of a defensive line in Poland, either before Warsaw or immediately behind the capital if it is too late now for the former. M. Millerand also proposed that the French and British troops in the plebiscite areas be used for this line, chiefly for moral support, and that Roumania and Czecho-Slovakia also be asked to send troops.

At the close of the conference, M. Millerand presented for the approval of the British delegates a declaration he had drafted. The substance of this constituted a warning to Germany that if an attempt is made in any way to co-operate with the Bolsheviki an army of the Allies will occupy the Ruhr region and other points in German territory. Mr. Lloyd George has not yet indicated his approval of the declaration, but French circles believe that he will agree to it, and that the warning will be conveyed to Germany either directly or by an allied declaration.

Further details of the meeting in London on Friday between the Bolshevik rerresentatives and Mr. Lloyd George were learned by the Associated Press. M. Krassin and M. Kameneff apparently thought they would be able to induce the Moscow Government to accept the terms of a truce, and the refusal of the Soviet Government is taken in conference circles here as meaning that Kameneff and Krassin have but minor influence with Premier Lenin and War Minister Trotsky.

At the conference Mr. Lloyd George offered every guarantee that the truce would not be used as a means of reinforcing the military position of the Poles. He went so far as to agree to have Bolshevik officers behind the Polish lines to see that the terms of the truce were rigidly enforced. The Premier answered all the Russian objections to the plan, and Kameneff sent the plan to Moscow by wireless, with a recommendation that it be adopted.

In British and French circles it is admitted that the situation created by the Bolshevik refusal of a truce has brought about a crisis only second in gravity to that which confronted the Allies in 1914.

French Enter Silesia.

BERLIN, Aug. 10.—Strong drafts of French artillery have been arriving in Upper Silesia by way of Czecho-Slovakia and numerous ammunition trains are rolling into the province, according to the Breslau correspondent of the Zwoelfuhrblatt. The workingmen, it is declared, are in a state of great excitement, believing that France intends to use Upper Silesia as a base for a relief expedition to Poland, and cite an alleged order given by the Inter-Allied Commission to railway authorities at Kattowitz, according to which further French drafts will begin to arrive there Sunday for transportation to Oderberg and Jedletz.

Maniac Murders Boy.

TORONTO, Aug. 10.—With his throat cut almost from ear to ear, a knife wound which penetrated his skull, and abrasions caused by two or three blows on his head, the body of eight-year-old Philip Goldberg was found at 4.35 Saturday afternoon behind the big billboards on Queen street west, just west of the Sunnyside Orphanage asylum. Every police official in Toronto has been furnished with a description of the man whom the police believe committed the murder. He is believed to be a maniac. Just one man, Robert McMurry, saw the supposed murderer as he was hurrying away from the tragic scene.

Labor Wins South Norfolk.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The result of the South Norfolk election, consequent on the succession of Mr. Coxens Hardy, the late member, to the peerage, resulted as follows:

Edwards, Labor, 8,594; Batty, Coalition-Liberal, 6,476; Roberts, Independent Liberal, 2,118.

Fifty-seven per cent. of the electorate voted. Mr. Edwards was largely identified with the agricultural laborers' organization, which is very strong in the constituency. He previously represented Lincoln in Parliament.

MANNIX IN ENGLAND.

Papers Criticise Government's Treatment of Prelate.

PENZANCE, Eng., Aug. 10.—Archbishop Mannix was landed here from a destroyer at 4.15 o'clock Monday afternoon. It was stated he intended proceeding to London.

A special despatch to the Evening Telegram from Dublin, said Mannix was forcibly transferred from the Baltic to a destroyer.

The announcement was made by the Government Press Association.

Penzance is a watering place, the most westerly town of England, nine miles from Land's End.

Newspapers of many shades of opinion find themselves in agreement in condemning the Government's handling of Archbishop Mannix. The Northcliffe papers, with the Daily Express and the Daily News, declare that the Government has endowed him with martyrdom, the Times adding that the Government's attitude seems dictated by fear, even though this prelate is generally discredited.

The Manchester Guardian says that a level headed Government would have allowed him to find out that he is not an ideal national hero in the eyes of Roman Catholic Irishmen. The Daily Graphic remarks that Australia is happy to lose him and thinks that he is making an egregious fool of himself. "If that is a faithful portrait," it adds, "one mountebank more cannot harm us."

The solitary exception to these lines of thought is furnished by the Morning Post, which says that the Government, having come to the only right, prudent conclusion, that in light of his notorious record he is not a fit person for complete liberty of action, the Government must not stultify its decision by half measures.

WANT PAPER FROM CANADA.

OTTAWA, Aug. 10. — It is fully anticipated here that one of the most important concrete results of the Imperial Conference, which has just concluded its labor at Ottawa, will be the early investment of heavy sums of British and Australian capital in the erection of pulp mills in the Dominion.

The question of paper supply is probably one of the most acute problems with which the Empire press, especially in the Antipodes, has to deal.

Papers in Australia and New Zealand are compelled to pay over $500 a ton for their supplies and have difficulty in securing an adequate amount at any price. Keen surprise was manifested by delegates at the intelligence that of the money invested in the pulp mills in Canada, only ten per cent. was English capital. As a matter of fact, no single mill in the Dominion is controlled by British interests. Five mills are in Canadian control. The others are exclusively in American hands.

Prior to the departure of the members of the conference, John Imrie, representing the publishers, was in receipt of many enquiries from delegates as to the opportunity for British capital. With the gradual improvement of the exchange situation it is anticipated that there will be heavy investments.

LABOR OPPOSES WAR.

Threats of Bolshevism Made In Great Britain.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—With the Russians reported shelling the outer forts of Warsaw, all Britain has turned anxiously towards the conference at Hythe between Premiers Lloyd George and Millerand, where the issue of peace or war was believed to be under discussion.

Thousands of Laborites throughout Britain were participating in anti-war demonstrations. Speakers urged workers to refuse to manufacture munitions for such an enterprise. Robert Williams, addressing a mass meeting at Newcastle, predicted that British intervention in behalf of Poland would result in establishment of Soviets in England within a year.

A Daily Mail despatch from Hythe said the Premiers had proposed to Russia that the Soviet Government agree to pay the debt to France incurred by the Czar's Government, that it agree to make peace with Poland at a general London conference with the Allies represented, that the Bolshevik troops withdraw from Poland, and that amnesty be granted Gen. Wrangel's followers provided they leave Russia.

Discovery of Helium.

A large commercial company for the production of helium has just been formed with retired officers of the United States air service among its directors. Helium is the non-inflammable gas which is now used in the place of hydrogen for the filling of dirigible balloons. While believers in helium do not under-estimate the possibilities of the airplane, they regard the helium-inflated balloon as the safest and most practical airship, especially for long voyages. They declare that the dirigible can travel a much greater distance than the airplane without stopping for fuel, that it affords a smoother way to travel the air, and with helium substituted for hydrogen, is practically indestructible.

The original discovery of helium in America was made in a little town called Dexter in southern Kansas. The men drilling for the natural gas had been confident of securing a supply sufficient for the households and industries of the community, so the event of opening the well was made a holiday for the people of Dexter.

A crowd collected and the well was dramatically opened, the gas rushed forth and in order to make the demonstration complete a lighted torch was thrust into the mouth of the well.

According to all rules, the gas should have immediately ignited and blazed forth the news of the opening of the well to the community, but it did nothing of the sort. The torch promptly went out and the people returned to their homes in a rage with nature, who had cheated them out of their promised supply of cheap fuel.

Samples of the mysterious gas were sent to the state university, where the secret of its fireproof qualities was disclosed. The gas was found to be particularly abundant in southern Kansas, where for years it was called "wind gas" and allowed to waste into the air.—Detroit Journal.

CATTLE MARKETS

TORONTO LIVE STOCK MARKETS.

TORONTO, Aug. 10.—With around 3,600 cattle on sale at the Union Yards yesterday, the market was considerably lower for all classes. A large number of cattle were on the market from Winnipeg and the west, and this naturally had a tendency to make the native Ontario cattle decline, which they did fully $1 per cwt.

Good butcher cows were fairly steady, but the medium and common were much lower, and even at the sharp decline the buyers were not apparently over anxious.

The bull trade, on the other hand, is satisfactory for the better class of handy-weight animals.

The lamb trade, with a heavy run, was slow and lower, the break in the price running all the way from $1 to $1.50 per cwt., with the bulk of the sales running around 15c, and a few extra handy, light ones selling for a little more money.

The hog market is quoted at 19¾c. f.o.b., and 20¼c fed and watered, for Monday's loading.

Receipts were 3,864 cattle, 785 calves, 331 hogs and 3,011 sheep and lambs.

Moslems Oppose Bolsheviki.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 10.—The Mohammedans cannot co-operate with the Bolsheviki without abandoning their religion, says a proclamation issued by Damad Ferid Pasha, Grand Vizier and Acting Minister of War. While offering amnesty to all Nationalists except the leaders, if they stop fighting immediately, the proclamation states that continued resistance by the Nationalists may force further dismemberment of the country.

It is reported that Damad Ferid will allow the Nationalist rebels to escape if fighting ceases. The latter condition is considered unlikely here since Mustapha Kemal Pasha, Nationalist commander, has announced he has just completed reorganization of his forces into two primary units called the Brusa and Ruyati armies.

Young Hough plunged in, and did not reappear. His companion located him in three feet of water.

W. D. Howells Passes Away

WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS was one of those writers who might be called classical, for everybody praised his work, but of late years few read his novels. He was also one of the few American novelists, one of the very few, who might be compared favorably with his English contemporaries. The rule is that American novelists compare with English novelists as Quebec tobacco compares with Virginian. In one sense he might be compared with Hardy, although their views on life were so dissimilar. But no modern American writer had so much influence upon the younger writers as Howells, and in England this applies to Hardy. The influence, needless to say, was for good. Howells' taste was admirable. He believed himself to be a realist, but as we understand the word now he was as much a realist as a man who believes in public ownership is a Bolshevist. However, he did not write in the heroic strain. He did not sentimentalize. He was not a romancer. Maybe this is why the general public has not warmed to his works. There is nothing in them to interest the moving picture producer.

"His character was beautiful," says the New York Tribune, and there are few who will challenge the word. There never lived a man more generous of praise to his contemporaries, nobody who was more willing to extend the helping hand to the beginner. Howells never "knocked," unless the object of his criticism happened to be dead. The result is that he was beloved of American literary folk to a degree that no other writer of his generation was beloved. On the occasion of his 75th birthday, which occurred in 1912, there was an amazing array of printed tributes from leading Americans and from eminent Englishmen of letters. There was a dinner in New York, which President Taft travelled from Washington specially to attend. In 1917 there was another dinner graced by the presence of the leaders of American thought, at which letters were read from President Wilson and ex-President Roosevelt. Mr. Howells was not present, having fled to escape the embarrassment of listening to further eulogies. Indeed, he must have been "fed up" with compliments.

Apart from the encouragement which Howells gave struggling writers, his own career is in itself an encouragement. Though he had honorary degrees from several universities, including Oxford, he never entered even a High School. He educated himself at the printer's case. His father owned a paper in Ohio, where Howells was born, and at the age of twelve the boy began to learn printing. His first compositions were not made on paper, but were set directly in type. Later on, he became what everybody but newspapermen call a "cub" reporter for the Ohio State Journal. He was then fourteen years old, so one can imagine how much conventional schooling he had received. At the age of twenty-one he was one of the editors of this important paper, and was vainly bombarding eastern magazines with his poems. It is recorded that he was an expert typesetter, a faithful reporter, and as an editor, gave unusual promise. At the age of twenty-three he produced a volume of verse, and shortly afterwards, by writing a campaign life of Abraham Lincoln, he made the first important stroke of his career.

The book brought him considerable money which enabled him to quit the West and go to the East where the literary readers of the day were to be met, and attracted the favorable attention of Lincoln, with the result that he was appointed American consul to Venice. He formed a friendship with Longfellow and won the good opinion of other contemporary writers. Before he gave up his consulate he had published a couple of volumes dealing with Italian life and when he returned home, he had already established something of a reputation as a literary man. Shortly after his return he established himself in Boston as associate editor of the Atlantic Monthly. Later on he became editor, and after some years resigned, in order to give himself more time for the production of novels. After an interlude of a couple of years spent in Europe he returned to the United States and became editor of the Editor's Study, a department of Harper's Magazine. Five years later he resigned to become the editor of the Cosmopolitan, but the connection was not congenial and soon was severed by Howells.

Since then he has been engaged almost exclusively in the production of novels, essays and reviews. His critical faculty was held to be second to none, and if he made errors of judgment, as some people do they were due to generosity. He was an industrious worker and produced as a rule, two novels a year. He had a suspicion of work that was easily done and was a believer in the genius of taking pains. The result was that his own novels show no signs of being labored over, for his last revision smoothed out the marks of effort "A Hazard of New Fortunes" and "The Rise of Silas Lapham" are perhaps the best known of his novels and the two that could most confidently be recommended to the average reader. If one doesn't like them there is no use in going further with Howells. He had a taste for choosing his titles from Shakespearean phrases, as for instance, "A Hazard of New Fortunes," "A Modern Instance," "The Shadow of a Dream," "The World of Chance" and "The Quality of Mercy." He has said: "My life was always full of literature to the bursting," and this seems adequately to characterize his great career.

JOBS FOR SOLDIERS.

D.S.C.R. Have Remarkable System of Handpicking Men.

The soldiers' employment offices have raised employment tactics from a mere signing of application cards to a scientific service undreamed of in those crowded days of a year ago.

Do you want a blond carpenter with blue eyes and a friendly disposition?

The Information and Service Branch of the D.S.C.R. will get him for you.

Service is the thing They handpick your man for you now.

Do you require six toolmakers at once, and there isn't one to be had in town?

That's all right. The D.S.C.R. will get them for you by telephone from Brantford or Windsor or elsewhere in a few hours.

Employers are not yet aware of this remarkable employment service. It has grown up out of army efficiency and dire need of returned soldiers. The Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment organized a branch called Information and Service for the purpose of organizing employment for the returned men.

To-day this branch has offices in every city and town in Canada. It has a daily and weekly clearance report from each office showing the number and kind of men available and the number wanted. It has its finger right on the pulse of the labor supply and demand of the whole Dominion.

Each morning, every district in the province renders him a report of the vacancies, men and trades required, and of the number desiring work.

These lists are consolidated, and by means of telephone and telegraph, the vacancies in one town are filled and the surplus of another town are transferred to waiting jobs. The consolidated lists, after being adjusted, are sent out to the different representatives all over the province; and copies are also sent to Ottawa. At Ottawa the head office adjusts vacancies for all over the Dominion and then sends the consolidated lists to every province.

Thus in Toronto, Capt. Meath can see the requirements of Winnipeg, Vancouver or St. John; and if he has the men to fit these vacancies he can arrange to send them. Or he may see that those cities have craftsmen needed here.

It is a labor clearance house in the first degree of efficiency. When the need of soldiers' re-establishment is past, the Government can take over a system for employment that will greatly alleviate unemployment conditions.

Expense of moving these men from place to place? Not nearly as expensive as paying unemployed men weekly wages out of the Unemployment Fund. And, of course, exchange of labor it done in the smallest moves possible; long moves being authorized only in extreme cases.

One of the feature departments of Capt. Meath's work is the business and professional branch under Mr. Arthur J. Monk. This department handles the technical and business men. It, too, is organized on a Dominion-wide basis.

Federal lists come in showing demands from coast to coast for mechanical draughtsmen, a doctor, sales executives, mill superintendent, jewelers, teachers, accountants, laboratory assistants. Mr. Monk sends in daily lists of men reporting to him and men wanted, and receives daily lists from within the district of men required and men available. Once a week he advises Ottawa of the men he has and the men required (which he cannot fill); and weekly he receives from Ottawa a Dominion-wide list of applicants and vacancies. If a knitting mill superintendent calls on him for a job he consults the list; sees that a knitting mill superintendent is required in Winnipeg, and either by wire or letter (or by phone at closer range) arranges the deal.

Some of the striking items on recent lists are: A doctor wanted for a small Western Ontario town of 700 inhabitants, wide practice, last doctor made $3,500 or $4,000 a year; a sales executive to build up a big motor firm's district, salary to start ... $2,400 and expenses; refrigerating expert, $175 a month; nineteen vacancies in all on the one list. But every man wanted must be a picked man.

PERCIVAL VIVIAN.

Our Chautauqua audiences have become very familiar with the name of Percival Vivian through the past two years, for he has appeared as head of the Ben Greet Players, and has given great pleasure to all who have heard him.

This year, under his direction, we are producing "Nothing But the Truth," the great play which had such a remarkable run in all the big cities including New York and Toronto. No better Chautauqua play was ever produced. It will show you how difficult it is to speak "Nothing But the Truth" for twenty-four hours. Suppose we try it for the six days of Chautauqua week.

MADE A QUEER WILL.

Late J. P. Secord of Orillia a Peculiar Genius.

John Pearson Secord lately achieved notoriety by leaving to his brother a large part of his estate on condition that the said brother, a lifelong "dyed in the wool" variety of Tory, should stand on the front steps of the town post office on the 24th of May in each year and shout "Hurrah for Laurier," at the same time insuring the presence of a large and curious audience by advertising the event ahead of time.

It was a curious will and one that is unique in Canadian records, but it was typical of the man who made it. J. P. Secord, during his long residence in the town of Orillia, where he was one of the leading citizens, followed out the policy of being a little different from the rest of the people in the world. Some people would speak of his eccentricities; would it not be just as fair to speak of them as evidences of his peculiar genius For instance, Mr. Secord was one of the few people who have been able to make a success of raising goats in Ontario. He always had about a half-a-dozen goats, sleek, well-fed animals that were more than pets. In the summer time he let them run wild on an island in Lake Couchiching, where he visited them every week.

But there was one place where Mr. Secord did more for his province than any other single man. He had what is undoubtedly the finest collection of historical relics gathered together by any single individual in Ontario. To start with were several chairs, etc., from the household effects of the greatest of her name in Canadian history — Laura Secord. There were head dresses of famous Indian chiefs, flint-locks and fowling pieces about which Mr. Secord could tell most entrancing stories, Indian adzes and other tools that were so unique that lovers of antiques from all the province came to see and admire them; and arrowheads and pottery without number. All of them had been picked up by Mr. Secord in his relic-seeking rambles around the countryside near Orillia, where in ancient days stood an Indian village.

The gem of the collection was a little silver cross of peculiar design and with certain characters engraved upon it. Mr. Secord pulled this out of the water while fishing at the Narrows, the thin strip of channel that connects Lake Simcoe and Lake Couchiching. Investigation proved that it had been lost by the great Champlain, who spent three days fishing at the Narrows in 1615. In his diary he reported the loss of the cross, which he described. There is no doubt of its genuineness, as it has been carefully examined by authorities, who have pronounced it the original lost by Champlain.

The collection has by the will been left to Mr. Secord's brother, Mr. Charles Frederick Secord, of Acton, Ontario, but one cannot help expressing the hope that it will some day pass to the Royal Ontario Museum, where it can be placed on view for all time.

Even Mr. Secord's death had a coincidence connected with it, for he died within a few hours of a gentleman who was his lifelong political enemy. The two men, one a staunch Liberal of the Laurier school, the other a Conservative of the Whitney school, had for many years refused to recognize each other on the street in passing, not because of any animosity based on personal reasons, but because of their diverse partizan views.

Some Strange Habits of Famous Writers.

A glimpse into the inner life of genius reveals some interesting facts, especially with regard to the rather eccentric habits that some have been wont to adopt when in the throes of composition or other matters connected with their work.

Whatever the cause of this eccentricity, these men of genius were firmly of the opinion that their work was rendered easier thereby; that bodily strain was minimized, and that ideas were apt to flow more rapidly, so much so that on one occasion Anthony Trollope remarked that the very clothes he wore seemed somehow to contribute to the effect of his best work. It was his opinion that the velvet coat, the neat slippers and the rest of it, all worn with an air of easy unconsciousness, were well calculated to enhance the vividness of his narration.

Buffon wrote in lace ruffles, and Sir Walter Scott liked to array himself in his shooting jacket from six o'clock until dinner time, whilst Guido Reno painted with much pomp and considered himself at his best when dressed magnificently, and had his pupils attend him in silence, ranged around him.

On the other hand, Flaubert, when in the throes of composition, used to throw off one garment after another, and Alexander Dumas wrote in his shirt sleeves.

Schiller, too, thought too many clothes detrimental to good work, and before composing put his feet into cold water.

Milton composed the greater part of his "Paradise Lost" in a large armchair, with his head thrown back.

Walt Whitman liked the recumbent position, but not in bed. His favorite practice was to climb on to a pile of lumber, lie down flat on his back, and thus think out his ideas.

Carlyle often isolated himself in a bare room at the top of the house, whilst Balzac would stay in bed for a fortnight at a time, and live on coffee.

Alexander Pope, too, did most of his work while comfortably tucked in bed, as also did Mark Twain, who always considered his best work was done while lying in bed, propped up with pillows, and smoking his favorite "corncob."

On the other hand, Thackeray found that he could not think in an empty room, and Sarti, the musician, went even further and composed only in darkness.

Charles Dickens invariably wrote in blue ink on blue paper, as he held the impression that the color of ink and paper greatly facilitated the flow of his ideas. Another idiosyncrasy of his was the writing of day and month in full, as "January twenty-sixth."

Charles Reade's restless spirit would not allow him to remain seated at a table for long. Much of his writing was done while standing at a high table, and Victor Hugo shared a similar view, for the whole of "Les Miserables" was written by the author while in a standing position.

Wilkie Collins always thought he felt more energetic when standing, as also did Gen. Wolseley and Nathaniel Hawthorne, the latter writing "The Scarlet Letter" and several other romances afoot, whilst Lord Byron composed many of his best poems on horseback.

DO ALL MY HOUSE WORK

Cobourg, Ont.—"For many years I have had trouble with my nerves and have been in a general run down condition for some time. I could not do my work half of the time because of the trouble with my monthly sickness. I was told of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound by friends and advised to try it. It has done me good, and I strongly recommend it. Since I have taken it I have been able to do all my own work, and I also know friends who have found it good. You can use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. ELLEN FLATTERS, Box 761, Cobourg, Ont.

Why will women continue to suffer so long is more than we can understand, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For forty years this good old fashioned root and herb remedy, which contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, etc.

Yarker Goes Back to Lamps.

The village of Yarker, after having been able to boast of being one of the best lighted villages in the district, has had to go back to coal oil lamps—but through no fault of the good people of that thriving village. Low water in the river, cutting off the power, is given as the cause of the trouble. Owing to this difficulty, the street lights have had to be cut off, as well as the house lighting. Low water is also giving much trouble at Benjamin's mill.

DESTROYING EXPLOSIVES.

No Use for Munitions Manufactured During the War.

All cordite and nitro-cellulose powder stored by the Imperial Munitions Board in Canada is being destroyed, explained Sir Joseph Flavelle, chairman of the board, when questioned the other day as to the reported destruction of 20,000 tons of cordite and powder which had been stored near Smith's Falls during the war. The amount to be destroyed cost between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 to manufacturers, Sir Joseph stated. He explained that [illegible] was now no market for [illegible] powder, and no purpose for which either could be usefully employed.

During the war the Imperial Government rented some land about a mile out of Smith's Falls, adjacent to the C.N.R. line, and had erected on it several high wooden buildings to be used for storing powder and cordite. Large quantities of these explosives, intended for use on the Germans, were stored there, and when the war ended the buildings were full. A railway siding was run to the buildings, and the Hydro system built a transmission line to it to light it. Mr. John Malloy was put in charge of it, and has had the supervision of it since the buildings were erected. Men guarded it day and night, and always there was a little uneasiness about what would happen if by any chance the stuff were exploded. Now it is being destroyed.

It appears nothing could be done with it in a commercial way, and an expert went there and gave Mr. Mulloy instructions to destroy it by burning it in the open. There are over 20,000 tons of it in boxes. For the purpose of getting rid of it, Mr. Malloy has rented a 200-acre field, which he is having ploughed and cleared. The material will be drawn to this field, placed in piles, and fired.

An experiment was made with about half a ton of it, and when it was fired by means of fuses the whole pile shot up into the air hundreds of feet, and there was nothing left, not even ashes. The work of destroying it is now going on, and when it is completed many people in the vicinity will sleep better o' nights.

War of 1812 Recalled.

An interesting find has been made by a Welland County lawyer reminiscent of the last war between the United States and Canada, over a hundred years ago. During that war, in December, 1913, the United States army captured Niagara-on-the-Lake, then the capital of Canada, it will be remembered, and burned the town. That has something to do with the story.

A lawyer was in the Welland Registry office looking up the records of a certain farm in Stamford. This farm was given to its first owners by the British Crown over a century ago. The owner then twenty years later sold it to another party and the deed of the transfer disappeared, and there has been a cloud on the title of the property for a century.

The lawyer, by means of his search, has been able to clear up the missing link in connection with the deed by producing the duplicate deed made April 9, 1894, and registered two days later at the Niagara Court House with the signature of John Powell, registrar, who was registrar at that time.

After the war of 1912-14 was over the Canadian Government, wishing to repair what damage the Americans had done, advertised that all parties who had registered deeds of property in this district should bring them in and have new copies made for registration, the original copies having been burned with the court house and Government buildings at Niagara. Evidently the owner of the Stamford farm had never seen the advertisement for there is no record of his deed in any registry office and now, after a hundred years, damage done in this one instance will be remedied and a clear title be given the present owner of the farm.

FOR PROFIT OR FOR SERVICE ?

by J. E. Middleton

Opponents of Public Ownership are slow to mention the many instances of financial exploitation which the records of Private Ownership provide. The fact that some electric railway or railways across the border may have got into difficulties is not necessarily a warning against the construction of Hydro-Radials in Ontario.

An electric line under Private Ownership is operated for the profit of individuals. Its capitalization frequently represents much more than the actual investment in the property. The road may be starved in the matter of equipment. The Company by giving a penurious service may have earned the hostility of the public.

Good-will has money value, in transportation as in any other business serving public requirements. Electric radial lines in Ontario, publicly owned, and operated by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission would have no shareholders to satisfy. Every dollar of revenue, over and above fixed charges and operating expenditure would be applied to the improvement of the property and the betterment of the service.

Under such circumstances people would get "the riding habit" which, as it develops in any community, is bound to benefit the neighboring railway lines. According to the press despatches of Dominion Day the cars of the London and Port Stanley Railway were jammed with people all through the holiday. Such business would not be possible if the line were poorly equipped; and carelessly operated by an unpopular private company.

The experience of Ontario with the Hydro-Electric Commission proves that the affairs of a great enterprise, publicly owned, may be directed without reference to politics or party favoritism. The record of the Commission in the generation and transmission of electric energy is an excellent one. Its finances have been well-managed. Its accounting system has stood the test of a rigid, independent investigation. Its engineering record is one of exceptional brilliance. A tradition of efficiency has been established, and there is no reason to fear that it will be departed from.

The very fact that the Commission favors making preparations now for the ultimate establishment of a system of Hydro-Radials is proof enough to most citizens that the need for better transportation facilities exists. The Commission has shown itself a public body not given to snap judgments or reckless decisions. It faced the difficult period of War and Reconstruction with courage and caution. Success in such years ought to be a guarantee of great success in normal times of peace. Ontario has and will have a low power-rate. Radials can be operated here, so far as energy is concerned, more cheaply than anywhere else. A Government inquiry is not needed to make such a conclusion. It is obvious to anyone who knows the record of "Hydro" in the Province.

He Was Expected.

A musty diplomatic secret has been disclosed in Philadelphia through announcement that Canada soon will send its own minister to Washington. It is that for the last ten years a specially made chair, carved with the Canadian coat of arms, has been waiting in Washington for use of this envoy.

Elihu Root, then Secretary of State, ordered the chair, one of many specially designed for the Pan-American Building at the capital, Andrew Carnegie's memorial to cement more firmly the relations of the Americas. The story is told by Albert Kelsey, of Philadelphia, one of the architects of the Pan-American building, who said:

"Once a month the ambassadors and ministers of all the American republics meet and are presided over by our Secretary of State in the Pan-American Building, and each representative has a chair of his own, with the arms of his country carved on the back.

"Now when these chairs were decided on, Secretary Root asked me to have an additional one made with the Canadian arms on it, which was done, and which has been hidden for the past ten years, for Secretary Root cautioned me—to use his expression—to be a 'little reticent about the matter'."

Peopling the World.

The present population of the world does not exceed 1,600,000,000. With an even distribution of people, relatively to area and soil productiveness, the planet on which we dwell might support 6,000,000,000.

But the distribution is exceedingly uneven. In India and China there are so many human beings that the failing of crops even slightly below from the normal for a single season means famine, bringing death to multitudes. A prime cause of the age-long turmoil in Europe is overcrowding, which makes frequent wars inevitable.

There is plenty of room in Africa and South America, when the conquest of the tropics (mainly a matter of disease elimination) shall have been accomplished. The latter continent—to-day relatively vacant territory for the most part—especially invites population, because, save in the far south, it is so bounteously watered.

The United States might maintain 2,000,000,000 inhabitants if it had an adequate rainfall, but a deficiency in that respect makes it impossible for that country ever to support more than 1,000,000,000. Water is the prime human requisite, all food production depending upon it, and for this reason the steady and fairly rapid spread of deserts on every continent gives good cause for anxiety.

TORONTO COUPLE PUT IT TO TEST

Munn and Wife Praise' Tanlac For the Way It Restored Them to Splendid Health

"Both my wife and I have put Tanlac to the test and we think it is a splendid medicine and we are glad of the opportunity of recommending it to others," said Edward Munn of 123 Ross Avenue, Toronto, the other day.

"For three years I was in a general run down condition, feeling tired and languid all the time, and always getting up in the morning as worn out as though I had been up all night. My stomach was all out of order so that what little I did eat gave me indigestion and never seemed to give me sufficient nourishment. After a meal the gas would form and cause me great distress and keep me in misery most of the time. I was badly constipated and I had frequent dizzy spells. When I attempted to stoop over I felt as though I would fall. I was always having headaches which upset me for my work and towards the last I got so weak I was fagged out all of the time.

"I heard so many people tell of the wonderful results they got from taking Tanlac that I decided to give it a trial myself. I hadn't got far on the first bottle before I knew it was doing me good. My in a short time I could eat anyappetite improved right along and thing I wanted without any fear of indigestion or gas. I am no or gaslonger troubled with dizzy spells or constipation, and I feel stronger and better in every way.

"When my wife saw the way Tanlac was helping me, she started taking it also, for she was in a badly run down condition at the time. It was just as effective in her case as mine and we are both now enjoying excellent health."

Tanlac is sold in Napanee at WALLACE'S Drug Store, in Camden East by R. J. OSTER, in Wagarville by S. JACKSON.

CURIOUS CLOCKS.

Two of Them Never Struck One o'Clock.

The announcement that the British Home Secretary has appointed a committee to consider and report as to the advisability of adopting in the United Kingdom, for official and other public purposes, the twenty-four hour method of expressing time, reminds one that among the most curious clocks in the world are two in Worsley, Lancashire, that never strike one. Instead they strike thirteen at one a.m. and one p.m. One of them is over the Earl of Ellesmere's place, called Worsley Hall, and is the original clock which the Duke of Bridgewater had placed in the tower. It is said that the duke had the clock made to strike the "unlucky" number so as to warn his workmen that it was time to return after dinner, some of them having excused themselves for being late on the ground that they could not hear it strike one.

This recalls the incident when the big clock of the Houses of Parliament saved a man's life. A soldier in the reign of William and Mary was condemned by court-martial for falling asleep while on duty on the terrace at Windsor. He stoutly denied the charge, and by way of proof solemnly declared that he heard Old Tom (the predecessor of Big Ben) strike thirteen instead of twelve. The officers laughed at the idea, but while the man was in prison awaiting execution, several persons came forward and swore that the clock actually did strike thirteen, whereupon the soldier was pardoned and released.

Wells Cathedral contains one of the most interesting clocks in the world. It was constructed by Peter Lightfoot, a monk, in 1320, and embraces many devices which testify to the ancient horologist's ingenuity. Several celestial and terrestrial bodies are incorporated in the interesting movement and relationship. They indicate the hours of the day, the age of the moon, and the position of the planet and the tides.

When the clock strikes the hour two companies of horsemen, fully armed, dash out of gateways in opposite directions and charge vigorously. They strike with their lances as they pass as many times as correspond with the number of the hour. A little distance away, seated on a high perch, is a quaint little figure, which kicks the quarters on two bells beneath his feet and strikes the hours on the bell. The dial of the clock is divided into twenty-four hours and shows the phases of the moon and a map of the universe.

An oddity in clocks is the invention of a Frenchman, Paul Cornu. It consists of a dial mounted above a reservoir and having a sort of seesaw mounted upon its support. The reservoir holds sufficient alcohol to last for a month, and this serves as fuel for a small flame that burns at one end. The heat from the flame causes the air to expand in the bulb of the seesaw directly above it. As a result, the seesaw moves every five seconds. This movement is the motive power that actuates the clock.

In Switzerland are made clocks that do not require hands and faces. The timepiece merely stands in the hall, and one presses a button, which by means of the phonographic internal arrangements calls out "Half-past four," or "Five minutes to ten," or whatever the time may be.

A Swiss has invented a remarkable sick-room clock. When a button is pressed an electric lamp behind the dial throws the shadow of the hours and hands magnified upon the ceiling, so that invalids can see it from bed without craning their necks or putting themselves to any inconvenience.

A Dutch shoemaker spent fifteen years of his leisure moment in constructing a clock of the grandfather shape nearly six feet high, made entirely of straw. The wheels, pointers, case, and every detail are exclusively of straw.

Why We Need More Money!

Last year our rates for service were increased by ten per cent.

That was the first general increase in telephone rates in over twenty-five years.

To-day the general level of commodity prices is three hundred and fifty per cent over what it was twenty-five years ago.

Our operating expenses in 1919 had increased 99 per cent over 1915, while gross revenue was only 49 per cent greater.

Wages absorbed over 56 per cent of our revenue last year, and our wage bill this year will be at least 35 per cent higher than in 1919!

It is apparent that if we are to continue to pay good wages, and so ensure good service, and at the same time pay such a return to investors as will attract new capital to enable us to extend our plant, we must earn more money!

We must accomplish both of these things, else service to our present patrons will suffer and new applicants for service cannot be accommodated!

Increased rates are the only source from which such further revenue can come!

A NEW RHINE POLICY

BARRES IS IN FAVOR OF MORAL CONQUEST.

French Writer and Politician Hopes to Break the Influence of Germany In Rhineland by "Spiritual Organization" Which Will Win the People Without Affecting In Any Way the Terms of the Peace Treaty.

FRENCH policy on the left bank of the Rhine appears to be generally misunderstood. There was undoubtedly a military party which would have taken simple steps to extend the frontiers of France to the Rhine in order to make France secure from invasion. But the real exponent of the Rhine policy is Maurice Barres, the writer and member of the Academy, who is also a member of the French Parliament. Maurice Barres is in favor of a moral conquest of Rhineland. He works for the separation of these regions from the influence of Prussia and is anxious to bring them within the zone of influence of France. Politically he would help all German parties who strive to escape the domination of Prussia. He expresses his ideas as follows: The guarantees promised by the Versailles Treaty have largely disappeared. The military conventions with the United States and England remain incomplete. The reservations of the Senate relative to the League of Nations destroy one more guarantee. At the same time the disarmament of Germany has not been accomplished. Every village possesses its arsenal. Thirty miles of territory on the right bank of the Rhine were to have been neutralized, but recent events have shown that German soldiers may enter this district. The power of investigation possessed by the Allies is hampered at every turn.

Maurice Barres and the large section of French politicians who think like him would make the most of the few years of occupation, and would endeavor to detach the Rhineland from Germany. The "Spiritual organization," as he calls it, can be proceeded with without contradicting any clause of the treaty. If necessary the treaty could be retouched. Germany is certainly not blind to the peril of a detached Rhineland, and Prussian Ministers have made a tour in the occupied districts while Bavarian Ministers have made a tour of the Palatinate. These Ministers have declared that French propaganda was showing a prodigious activity. Mr. Barres denies that hitherto the propaganda has been active, and affirms that the lively desire for autonomy which manifests itself on the Rhine is spontaneous, and the just consequence of methods of tyranny and oppression that Prussia has employed in provinces which are really alien to her. The manifestations of the Rhenish populations from the frontiers of Alsace to the frontiers of Holland were not for France, but were against Berlin. That is the contention of a powerful French party. Now it is impossible for them to give themselves the regime of their choice unless they enter into an economic pact with France.

As a fact there is a huge project of buying directly from the industrial organizations of Rhineland. An effort is being made to create common interests between this part of Germany and France, interests between the Rhenish workers as well as the Rhenish manufacturers, and France. It is proposed that the necessary labor-power for the reconstruction of the devastated regions shall be accorded to those workers. This would constitute one link between the two countries. The Confederation Generale du Travail is asked to collaborate. Certain territory on the right bank would be included in this economic agreement. It is alleged that the German Government has drawn up black lists which would deprive of coal all Francophile industries in the Rhine provinces. Against this the French would enter into contracts with the directors of Rhine industries to supply them with coal which comes from the Ruhr valley.

Preferential treatment, in short, is proposed by France for Rhineland. There is being studied a list of products which could be exchanged between France and these provinces. What works of public utility and of common interest could be undertaken? Is it not possible to obtain advantageous terms for transports, Customs, and for commercial travelers? Article 270 of the Versailles Treaty reserves to the Allied powers the right of applying a special customs regime for both exports and imports. It will be seen that formidable pressure can be put upon the Rhine provinces in order to bring them within the economic orbit of France, and to tighten the links which bind them to France. At the same time it is easy to separate them from Germany.

In addition to the economic action there should be, according to this party, an intellectual action. French culture and the French language should be spread along the Rhine. The University of Strasbourg, the capital of Alsace recently taken from Germany, would serve as the chief strategic point for this intellectual action.

Movements in the Rhenish provinces have not been for complete separation from Germany, but for autonomy and for the prerogatives and the name of a state. Obviously, if France and the Allies occupy these regions they can greatly favor, if they wish, such movements. Mr. Barres preaches unceasingly an energetic propaganda in this sense. Naturally it is denied that France has taken or would take any part in mere political plots. She would not be behind coups d'etat intended to place persons or parties in power. But she would do her best to influence the sentiments of the people.

BLUDGEONING SUGGESTED.

Americans Want to Grab Canadian Pulpwood.

A lively campaign is being centred in Washington in favor of bludgeoning Canadian provinces that have restrictions against the export of their pulpwood into lifting them in order that United States newsprint mills may get unlimited supplies of raw material. The American view of the situation, builded as it is upon false premises, is intensified by a despatch from Montreal which recently appeared in the Wall Street Journal, New York, containing this, among other statements: "It would take 344 years to exhaust the Canadian pulpwood limits at the current rate of consumption if the estimate of the Dominion Commission of Conservation be reasonably accurate. The limits contain at least 1,033,000,000 cords, a third in Quebec Province."

An official denial by the commission that it had ever made or authorized such a statement was scarcely needed by those who have followed its insistent warnings that there is a measureable limit to our forest wealth, which is being appreciably approached under the present reckless system of depletion. The refutation of the despatch lends emphasis to Bulletin 25 issued by the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association in which the true situation regarding the pulpwood resources of the Dominion is set forth. Not the least interesting bit of information is that in 1919 American exports of newsprint totalled 110,295 tons. In the argument at Washington on the Underwood retaliation resolution, 63,000 tons were given as the minimum by which production and importation of newsprint fell below consumption. The retention and utilization of a little more than half of its export of newsprint would have obviated the shortage which the United States interests say should be made good by the unrestricted importation of Canadian pulpwood—somewhat over 1,000,000 cords of which were received by American pulp and paper mills last year. This [illegible] addition to an import of 624,0[illegible] tons of Canadian-made newsprint.

In its survey of the existing supplies in Quebec the bulletin quoted, dealing with the principal and best woods for paper making—spruce and balsam—and basing its estimates on official statistics and surveys of such woods commercially accessible, figures that there are 155,000,000 cords actually available. On the basis of the cut of 1918, around a million cords, this would be the equivalent of 52 years' supply. Under proper management and protection, it is figured that it might be possible to realize an annual growth of five million cords of spruce and balsam in Quebec, but, as in the case of Ontario and other provinces, it is felt that the requirements to this end are not being adequately met. Fire, the attacks of the budworm on the balsam trees, and lack of forestation are the drawbacks not yet properly dealt with in conserving Canada's timber wealth.

In Ontario it is expected that the cutting of spruce and balsam, which was slightly over 1,116,000 cords in 1918, will soon reach 1,500,000, representing "only 67 years' supply of wood accessible to existing transportation." A gross total of 145,000,000 cords of pulpwood is given as now available in the Province of Ontario, with 55,000,000 more in the event of the Timiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway being extended to James Bay, but the former is cut down to a net of 100,000,000 cords and the aggregate to 138,000,000 after allowances for waste, loss in logging and driving, and defective balsam. It is added: "As has been pointed out with reference to Quebec, there is no net volume increment in the natural mature forest, growth being balanced by decay."

In New Brunswick it is estimated that there are 26,000,000 cords of available spruce and balsam, which, at the 1918 rate of cutting, when there was a reduction over the previous year, would represent but 26 years' supply. The Nova Scotia cut has considerably decreased, and the estimated 25,000,000 cords of pulpwood there would be equivalent to 80 years' supply.

It is reasonably safe to predict, however, that the 344 years' supply story printed in New York will do yeoman service for the agitators in the United States who want to keep their mills going on raw material from Canada, having exhausted their nearest available native supplies by the profligate methods of cutting they want to force upon this country.—Toronto Globe.

The Men Again.

After starting for his work the other morning Taylor happened to think of something he had forgotten, and returned to the house to get it.

While walking about the kitchen he heard a great racket upstairs. Considerably alarmed, he called:

"What in the world is the matter, Mary? Has anything ahppened?"

There was a moment's silence, then the lady replied:

"Oh, is that you?"

"Yes. Who did you think it was?"

"I heard someone walking about down there, and I thought it was a burglar."

"But the noise—"

"I was making a lot of noise so that he would think there was a man in the house."

A ROMANTIC CHARACTER.

Memory of Owner of Montgomery's Tavern to Be Honored.

The Dominion Government has just notified a special committee of the York Pioneer and Historical Society, that a tablet is to be placed in the Eglinton post office commemorative of the late John Montgomery, founder of the suburb, and marking it as the spot in York country where history and romance are most mingled. Such an announcement must come as a distinct relief to those who can see in the present "unrest," no opportunities for future historians, and can recognize no glamor of romance in the events that have become so commonplace in the monotonous cycle of agitation, progress and strikes. Such a singling out of Eglinton recalls tales of the early days.

It is an interesting coincidence that Mrs. O. B. Sheppard, granddaughter of the late John Montgomery, should be a member of the special committee deputed to nominate the most historical point in York for honors from the Dominion Government. For three years her grandfather had knocked at the doors of the Provincial Government in vain attempts to secure remuneration for damages to his famous Yonge street hostelry, which was burned by Loyalist forces in 1837.

John Montgomery's grandfather, Alexander Montgomery, left Scotland for Ballyleek, Ireland, and then crossed the Atlantic, landing in New York. His father, also named Alexander Montgomery, in 1776 joined the famous band of United Empire Loyalists, who sought refuge under British law at Gagetown, New Brunswick. A cousin was Gen. Richard Montgomery, commander of the American forces, who fell before Quebec in 1775. John Montgomery, himself, was born at Gagetown in 1784.

In 1798 with his father he landed in Little York, in his memoirs described as "ten log houses and six or eight puncheon roofed shanties." His father's first host in York was John Robinson, father of the late Attorney-General Robinson.

After the storm of American invasion, in which all had to defend their homes, had passed, he moved with his father and family to Newton Brook. Here he lived until 1820, when at his marriage he opened the "Sickle and Sheaf" Inn, later known as Montgomery's Tavern. It stood at the corner of Yonge street and what is now called Montgomery avenue. It was the first step in the naming of Eglinton. To-day in its place stands the fine Eglinton post office, across the avenue to the north are the most northerly of Toronto's police and fire stations. The intersection is known as "Brown's Corners."

Among the points in York in 1837 where the "Reformers" of the period met to discuss the need for a general protest against the oppression of the "Family Compact," none was more popular than Montgomery's Tavern. It was this connection with William Lyon Mackenzie and other prominent agitators that brought John Montgomery close to the gallows a few years later. Just when the outbreak took place, however, he had leased his tavern and was boarding until his country mansion was finished. On the night of December 5, 1837, the rebels whose project Mr. Montgomery had actually discountenanced, halted before the door of the tavern. They were charged by the regulars and history tells the rest. Col. Moodie died in the tavern and John Anderson, a well-known reformer, was killed. After the battle, by the order of Sir Francis Bond-Head, the tavern was burned, and, despite his protestations of innocence, John Montgomery was brought before Chief Justice John Beverley Robinson on the charge of treason.

"When you and this jury who have sentenced me are sizzling with the devil, I will be keeping a tavern on Yonge street," was all John Montgomery "had to say" when he was sentenced by Chief Justice Robinson. The scaffold on which the notorious Lount and Matthews, rebels, had been hanged was left before his window. The only messages he received from the outside world were brought in a goose's wing hollowed out and carried under the arm of his daughter who was allowed to visit him daily. A commutation of sentence to one of life imprisonment was finally secured, however, and with three companions he was transferred to Kingston Fort. Their escape from these walls and their flight to the United States reads like fiction, but it was no less real. Finally the "Queen's pardon" was granted, and with his health badly impaired, the old patriot moved back to Eglinton, where he rebuilt on the site of the old "Sickle and Sheaf" Hotel, a new and more pretentious building. Here he resided until 1856, when he moved to the centre of Toronto and erected the Robinson House on Bay street, now the premises of the National Club.

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. OUR FARM PRODUCTION

CAREFUL STATISTICS ARE NOW BEING KEPT.

Crop Acreage and Live Stock Count Are Given by the Farmers in June—The Accuracy Has Improved and Risk of Error Is Reduced as the Number of Returns Increases.

Amongst the statistical reforms accomplished or inaugurated by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, established in 1918, none is of more importance than that which is concerned with agriculture, the leading industry of Canada. It is essential that the mercantile, banking and insurance interests should have accurate information respecting the country's annual agricultural production, and that statesmen and legislators should know the volume and direction of the country's progress. To farmers themselves it is of supreme importance to know what areas are being devoted to particular crops in their own and other countries, how such crops are being extended or withdrawn from cultivation and what is the volume of production in one season as compared with another. They should, by means of accurate information on these points, be able to form their own judgment as to the local crops likely to prove most remunerative. Similarly, a knowledge of the number of farm live stock, and whether these are increasing or decreasing from year to year, is important to all dealers; and is at least of equal importance to breeders and producers. Moreover, Canada as a country adhering to the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, has undertaken to furnish periodical reports on the agricultural production of the Dominion, receiving and publishing in exchange the valuable information respecting the agricultural production of other countries which the Institute collects and disseminates.

In Canada, estimates of agricultural statistics by the Dominion Government have been annually made since 1908, these estimates having been compiled from the returns of crop correspondents in percentages of the previous year's data. Except for immediate and tentative purposes, this method has now been abandoned as imperfect; and during the past three years the annual agricultural statistics of the Dominion have been based upon returns of areas sown and numbers of live stock on the farm, collected from individual farmers in the month of June. This information is obtained by means of a simple cardboard schedule, which is distributed to farmers through the agency of the rural school teachers and children. The cards, when completed, are first sent to the Provincial Government, who, after having them sorted into counties or districts, transmits them to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics at Ottawa for final compilation into totals by adding machinery.

The figures thus collected form a fairly sure basis for estimating the totals according to the ratio which subsists between the total number of farms and the returns actually receiver. After harvest and threshing, estimates are obtained from crop correspondents of the average yields per acre, which multiplied by the areas, give the total yields. The total yields, when multiplied by the average values per unit, give the total values. The final results are adjusted after consultation between the Dominion and provincial authorities, and identical figures are then released for simultaneous publication by the Dominion and Provincial Governments, the former publishing the figures for each province and for the whole of Canada, and the latter publishing the figures in and for their respective provinces, and in most cases by local counties or crop districts as well. There is in one or two cases some variation of procedure. For instance, in Ontario the process is reversed, and the cards are issued and collected by the Dominion Government for compilation by the Provincial Government, the final estimates being calculated from the total acreage according to plans long in use.

It is the aim of the Dominion and provincial statistical authorities to secure an annual return from every individual farmer in the Dominion. The issue of trustworthy annual agricultural statistics is important for all classes of interests in Canada, but to none is it of greater importance than to farmers themselves, who otherwise carry on their industry in the dark and are liable to be victimized by unscrupulous traders. It is impossible to prevent, were it desirable to do so, the issue of animal estimates of grain and meat production; and consequently it is to the interest of the rural community that statistics relating to their industry should be accurate and truthworthy and be put forth on independent and unbiased authority. No individual returns are published, and the information collected is not used in any way for taxation purposes. It is confidently expected that as farmers become better acquainted with the system organized for their benefit and realize the practical value to themselves of accurate agricultural statistics there will be a continuous increase in the proportion of returns. Meanwhile, it should be remembered that whatever degree of error may attach to the figures issued is attributable to the estimate that has to be made from the actual returns. In fact, any imperfection of the system is due to the extent to which farmers, whether from apathy, negligence or mistaken prejudice, make default. In proportion as the number of returns is increased and the necessity for estimation is in consequence reduced, will the risk of error be eliminated and the greater accuracy of the totals be established.—[illegible] the Dominion Statistician, [illegible]

WHIMS OF THE WEALTHY.

Men With Money Often Prove Very Eccentric.

That possession of much of this world's goods is frequently attended by the weirdest eccentricities is amusingly illustrated by the following curious instances:

In Vienna there lived a wealthy man, a Pole of noble origin, occupying sumptuous apartments in the heart of the capital's fashionable quarter, who, when he wished to summon his servants, did so by means of bugle-calls. A favorite pastime of this eccentric was to drive a stagecoach, attired like any ordinary driver of such a vehicle, wherever he might find aristocratic cars to be most numerous.

The Viennese asserted that while he spent a fortune each year upon his raiment, yet he was never clad in any save the discarded garments of his valet. On one occasion the Pole astounded the guests at a ball by appearing in a costume of pure white, with the notable exceptions of shirt and tie, which were entirely black. To complete the oddities, it may be added that when dining, which he invariably did alone at a table d'hote, he maintained his reputation for crankiness by reversing the usual order of things and beginning his meal with a demitasse, working backward to the soup.

It was not long ago that there died in an eastern town a wealthy eccentric who, though he had never for years been outside the grounds surrounding his residence, was accustomed to boast each day that he had walked to certain towns, generally at a great distance from his house. What he actually did was this. Whenever he decided that it would be an excellent idea to visit a distant town, he ascertained its exact distance from his home, and covered it on foot on a carefully-measured walking-track maintained on his premises for this purpose. Should he desire to call on his friends near by, he would do so by proxy, at the same time conducting a conversation with them by means of the servants, whom he sent in relays with certain questions, with strict injunctions to bring the answers as speedily as possible.

A well-known Parisian, according to his own statement, for many years defied the weather by drinking a solution of camphor, which, in his opinion, was an excellent substitute for clothing. It was said that winter and summer alike found him sleeping without a particle of clothing, with the windows of his apartments thrown wide open. It was his custom also to stroll in the garden, even on bitterly cold nights, in a garment much resembling that ordinarily worn by normal people only at night.

Among the wealthy eccentrics of England was a man who lived near Hastings. His fad excited much attention and amusement among his neighbors. Punctually at noon each day he would appear in his front yard with a crimson turban on his head, his feet covered with richly embroidered and jewelled sandals, and with a coolie cloth round his waist. Then he would first pray aloud to the sun, "the father of light and good," and immediately afterward prostrate himself before a quaint miniature temple wherein was enshrined a grotesque idol with diamond eyes. What made his eccentricity remarkable was the fact that he was not of Eastern origin, nor had he ever been converted to any religious faith or cult of the East.

The Movements of Fish.

The erratic movements of fish are a constant source of worry to scientists, who, try as they will, can never account for the vagaries of these sea dwellers. An American writer relates a case in point. In May, 1879, the fishing schooner Hutchings, sailing from Gloucester, on the Atlantic coast, was under the command of Captain Kirby, trawling for cod. A strange fish came up in the nets, a large creature covered with yellow spots. The men caught two tons and brought them to land, where they were found to be an entirely new family. Scientists named them "tile fish." For three years, until 1882, the were caught in large numbers. Then the "bankers" reported that they were no longer to be seen. The news came that the sea was covered with dead tile fish. Six thousand square miles of sea were almost hidden by the dead bodies. Authorities said that there must have been a volcanic disturbance or else some deadly disease had killed off the fish. In 1915 a schooner working the same waters caught the tile fish in abundance, and to this day the fish are there in millions.

The Whole Truth and 'Nothing but the Truth'

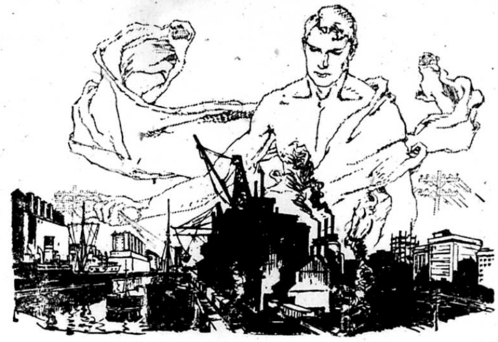
When Attempted by Twenty-four Hours Produces Gales of Laughter

Did you ever tell the truth for twenty-four hours at a stretch?

Maybe you did. But did you have $10,000 at stake? And then did you come near losing the sweetest girl in all the world just because you did tell the truth?

Robert Bennett did. And Chautauqua audiences this summer will have a chance to follow his vicissitudes as they watch the play, "Nothing But the Truth," as presented by the Percival Vivian Players.

The play, by James Montgomery, is one of the cleverest farces ever shewn on the American stage. Its screamingly funny situations are interwoven with tense and emotional developments that make for a complete whole. There is a laugh every minute, with smile between each laugh.



BEHIND every industry in Canada—

—from the patient truck-gardener bowed over his lettuces—

—to the young manufacturer struggling to prove the worth of Canadian skill and Canadian material in some new enterprise—

—stand the railways—the intelligence, the power and the hopes of the railways of Canada.

* * *

Not, like the Exploiter, watching to take harsh advantage of hard-times or the follies of a boom—

Not seeking by a moment's shrewdness to "clean up a million and get out!"

Not interested in the price of real estate in just ONE town, or the prosperity of just ONE province—

But, instead, employing their widely-gathered intelligence in the interests of all Canada for all time to come!

For the railways of Canada cannot be lifted up and carried away to serve any other master than Canada!

Their services cannot find any buyer but Canada!

They injure themselves if by asking too high returns To-day they damage the prosperity of the citizens of To-morrow.

* * *

The request for increased freight rates is made with these facts in view.

Canada will still have the cheapest, the fastest and the most reliable railways in the world!

Cultivation of the Hoed Crops.

The Hoed Crops in Ontario are made up principally of corn, beans, potatoes, turnips, mangels, and carrots. These crops occupy fully one million acres annually. During the past fifteen years, the area used for corn has increased, that used for roots has decreased, and that for potatoes has remained practically the same with exception of some variations in individual years.

All the root crops here referred to do well after sod, especially after clover. It is generally well to have the land ploughed in the early autumn. If manure is available, the land could be worked before winter, manured and placed in narrow ridges about thirty inches apart. This enables the frost to work on the subsoil between the ridges, and preserves the fertility in the ridges themselves. Land prepared in this way works splendidly in the spring when brought into cultivation. In the case of potatoes, it is much better to manure in the autumn than in the spring, and its is frequently recommended to manure even for the crop previous, in order to prevent the development of a large amount of scab on the tubers. Farmyard manure for the Hoed Crops can often be supplemented to advantage by a limited use of commercial fertilizers. The fertilizers have given particularly good results in connection with co-operative experiments throughout Ontario with potatoes, mangels, and turnips. The application of 160 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre increased the mangel crop about six tons per acre per annum in average of five years' test. A potato fertilizer made up in the proportion by weight of seven parts of nitrate of soda, sixteen parts of superphosphate, and nine parts of muriate of potash, has given economical results where it is used at the rate of 320, 640, or 960 pounds per acre.—Dr. C. A. Zavitz, O. A. College, Guelph.
